

RAINDROPS

While the rain keeps coming,
I'll sit here, humming,
the melodies, that we sung, before your heart stopped drumming.

You'd sit there for a while,
then get up with that smile,
and wonder over to the window sill,
to watch the drops race from their turnstiles.

But, unlike the raindrops, you fall on me no more.
While I'm a wave crashing, you're already at the shore.

As tears swept my face,
I held my mum's embrace,
She said, "don't you worry, she's safe now,
and in a better place".

The words stayed in my thoughts,
As you entered heaven's courts,
You're in every single song I write,
despite life's onslaughts.

(Chorus)

Ooooh

While I'm a wave crashing,
While I'm a wave crashing,
While I'm a wave crashing,
You're at the shore.

